Bringing Excellence to Rural America

Riding for Rural Recovery

A Fund Raiser for the National Rural Institute on Alcohol and Drug Abuse

The National Rural Institute is a week long seminar that focuses on the special needs of rural America in the prevention and treatment of chemical dependency. For the last 17 years, the NRIADA has worked to represent, study, and focus on the problems and special circumstances that face our nation in the area of chemical dependency in small town America. The limitations in service agencies, support groups, and funding create challenges not experienced in urban areas.

- Drug use among teens in small towns is reaching alarming proportions
- Eighth graders in rural areas are 104% more likely than stude urban areas to use amphetamines
- Eighth graders in rural areas are 50% more likely to use cocaine, 84% more likely to use crack cocaine, and 34% more likely to smoke marijuana than urban 8th graders
